A 65-year-old male patient with a long history of hypertension and diabetes mellitus presented to the emergency department with a 2-day history of severe, constant, and worsening abdominal pain. The pain was located in the right upper quadrant and was associated with nausea and vomiting. The patient had no fever, chills, or changes in bowel habits. He had no recent travel, alcohol consumption, or use of new medications. His medical history was significant for hypertension, diabetes mellitus, and a previous episode of cholecystitis. He was currently taking lisinopril, metformin, and aspirin. His physical examination was remarkable for tenderness in the right upper quadrant and a positive Murphy's sign. Laboratory studies showed a white blood cell count of 12,000/mm³ with a left shift, a serum bilirubin of 2.5 mg/dL, and an aspartate aminotransferase (AST) of 150 U/L. An abdominal ultrasound showed a dilated gallbladder with a thickened wall and a small amount of pericholecystic fluid. A computed tomography (CT) scan of the abdomen showed a dilated gallbladder with a thickened wall and a small amount of pericholecystic fluid. The patient was diagnosed with acute cholecystitis and was treated with intravenous antibiotics and pain management. He underwent a laparoscopic cholecystectomy 2 days later and was discharged home on the fourth day of hospitalization.
